

1 Hazelton Public Library and

Pioneer Museum. Here one can explore Hazelton's rich pioneer history. The Collins Overland Telegraph Line, early voyages up the Skeena River by canoes and paddlewheel boats, the history of local bridge construction and British Columbia's first northern hospital, are only a few of the historic features of Hazelton that this museum explores. The library offers free internet access, friendly service, and a rich local history collection.

2 In Polly Sargent Park one can enjoy a stroll along the Skeena River and explore a number of artifacts from Hazelton's steamboat days. Throughout July and August the information booth stationed here provides free maps and information, along with free 30-minute guided walking tours of the village. Ask here for information about upcoming performances by the Hazelton Area Theatre Society.

3 Bastion Park. Once the site where the Hudson's Bay Company built their first post in Hazelton (c.1886), this spot on the Skeena River was the upriver terminus for the HBC and other trading companies who supplied goods for mining towns, railway crews, farms, and locals.

4 Take a stroll along the Pack Train Trail. This is the trail head where pack traders began their long journeys with dogsleds and mules to deliver their goods, often traveling several hundred miles east, south and north of Hazelton.
